Rationale

The main objective of the Conference is to create an effective and cooperative atmosphere between speakers and attendees in order to make the scientific sessions as interactive as possible.

The scientific program is intended to represent, for all participants, a valid update on the main physio pathological, clinical, diagnostic, therapeutic and management aspects of respiratory diseases, as well as a fundamental opportunity to exchange views for all respiratory physicians who have to deal with acute or chronic respiratory pathologies in their daily practice. Leading experts and academics in the field will be involved, reporting not only on the theoretical aspects and scientific updates on their area of expertise, but also on their experience in practical management, making this conference a valuable learning experience.

The congress will focus, among other topics, on:

- Advances in COPD: from pathophysiology to therapeutic approaches
- Multidisciplinary care in the management of Covid-19
- Innovation in diagnosis and therapy of lung cancer
- Lung cancer in the era of precision medicine
- Interstitial lung diseases: from diagnosis to end stage lung
- New frontiers in pharmacology of bronchial asthma
- Management of acute and chronic respiratory failure
- New perspectives in lung disorders
